Columnist urges 'outrage'

by LISA SCHWARTZ

Colman McCarthy, a nationally syndicated columnist for the Washington Post, urged Wartburg students and faculty to "develop a sense of outrage" toward social injustice.

In a convocation last Wednesday, McCarthy expressed his concern for the homeless and needy. The current hard times have lengthened the soup lines and the people in them are getting younger and younger, he said.

"Many of them look just like you and me."

"We've become accustomed to this," McCarthy said. "If you refuse to adjust to it, then you're branded as maladjusted." He said his heroes are those who think this adjustment to social injustice is wrong.

McCarthy said people need to start making choices of what they want to become angry about and where to apply their skills toward working for change.

An outspoken pacifist, McCarthy opposes President Ronald Reagan's effort to build up the military. Because there are "other ways to solve problems than with violence," he suggested a peace resistance movement and condoned conscientious objection.

McCarthy said people aren't educated early enough in ways of non-violence and need to hear this option in the classroom. He would like to see more courses offered in peace studies as a degree in colleges across the country.

Wartburg grads securing jobs

Despite a depressed economy, Wartburg graduates continue to be successful in being placed, according to a survey of the class of 1982 by the Career Development Center.

Of 199 graduates responding to the center's questionnaire, 93 percent had secured employment or made plans to further their education in graduate, professional or continuing education programs within seven months of graduation.

The 199 figure represents 98 percent of 1982's graduating class.

"I think the real recession is in hard industry," Nancy Nish, director of the Career Development Center, said, "so liberal arts graduates have been doing well. We did well last year and again this year. Needless to say, I am pleased."

This year's figure of 93 percent is down only 1.5 percent from last year but is still higher than the placement figures of 81.8 percent in 1977 and 92 percent in 1978.

Of the respondents to the questionnaire, 38 had entered the teaching profession, 96 were employed by business or industry or were in social service professions, 42 were seeking additional schooling or attending graduate school and eight were not actively seeking employment.

Only 14 graduates had not located employment as of December, 1982.

There were a number of areas which could boast 100 percent placement, including music therapy, computer science/mathematics, political science/history and philosophy/religion.

Other areas with high placement figures were biology, chemistry, physics, medical technology and physical therapy, 97 percent; physical education/leisure services, 94 percent; communication arts/English, 94 percent; law enforcement/psychology, 94 percent; social work and sociology, 94 percent; and elementary education, 93 percent.

Thirty-one percent of the total responding answered additional questions concerning their placement, largely dealing with the job search process.

Of the latter group, 90.5 percent said their current position was either directly or indirectly related to their preparation at Wartburg.

Slightly over half, 52.6 percent, found their jobs either through direct contact with their employer or through the services of the Career Development Center.

It took a bit of searching on the part of the graduate. Forty percent wrote 11 to 30 letters of application before being employed. However, 41.7 percent wrote fewer than 10.

The students apparently were somewhat selective because 54.8 percent had three to 10 interviews with prospective employers before settling on a job. Forty-two percent had just one or two interviews.

College to meet student aid ban

by JOHN MOHAN

Wartburg College will comply with a federal law designed to prohibit draft registration resisters from receiving federal financial aid, according to Susan Brady, financial aid director.

At this time, the college will not replace aid denied a registration resister, Brady said. If a war were to break out or funds were denied a conscientious objector, the college would reconsider its position, she added.

The student aid ban, which would require students to show proof of registration for the draft, is scheduled to become effective June 30, 1983, according to Student Aid News, a financial aid administrator's newsletter.

Problems seem to be barring the way to smooth implementation of the program. Brady said a required verification letter will slow the making of awards. Brady suggested a theoretical situation where an 18-year-old student applies for a duplicate letter of verification in August. He might not receive that letter until February delaying his award until March of the school year.

Personal problem

Another problem raised by the student aid ban is a personal one for Brady.

"I have an uneasy feeling looking at draft registration," Brady said. "I believe this is unfair encroachment on the school. The government has other mechanisms if it wants to prosecute. The school's role now is just an extension of the Selective Service

"I have to ask myself, 'Who am I representing, the school and the students, or the government?'

Brady said she understands the law. "It is the federal government's money and their law." She said the school will comply with the law.

Constitutionality challenged

Aside from the personal and mechanical problems of the law, Brady noted that the law is being challenged in court on the grounds it is unconstitutional. The Minnesota Public Interest Research Group (MPIRG) claimed the law discriminates against men, particularly poor men, and violates their constitutional protection of trial before punishment, according to the Student Aid News.

The Student Aid News quotes Dan Lass, an MPIRG attorney. The U.S. Constitution is violated "when the legislature determines guilt and inflicts punishment without a trial." MPIRG recently filed a lawsuit in the U.S. District Court for Minnesota.

Brady said she feels the lawsuit will be successful. She added the school is hoping MPIRG wins the suit. "That is part of the reason we are not committing ourselves to replacing aid," Brady said.

Lass continued to say in the newsletter the law requires "clear and unequivocal discrimination on the basis of wealth. If you have the money, you don't have to worry about this law."

MPRG noted in a prepared statement, "MPIRG is not taking a position on draft registration. Registration is the law. Enforcement in this context, however, is unconstitutional and it is that which MPIRG is challenging."

Regulations distributed

Regulations governing the administration of the new law are scheduled to be distributed by Jan. 30. The regulations come from the Office of Education. Brady said that the regulations are subject to a 45-day response period. After that time, the regulations will become law, she added.

The actual procedure for the law will be spelled out in the regulations, but Brady said students will have to meet certain requirements no matter what the form of the regulations. Students will have to prove they were born before December 1959, or that they have registered for the draft. Other exemptions include non-citizens, females or students under

'Press Day' important to all

This Wednesday has been declared National Freedom of The Campus Student Press Day by the National Council of College Publication Advisers. Although no organized campus activities have been scheduled for that day, all members of the Wartburg community should stop to consider the role freedom of the press plays in their lives.

Freedom of the press is guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. In the 1960s, this constitutional guarantee was extended to the student press.

The freedom granted the press involves the freedom to gather information, to write the facts without fear of unlawful retribution and to circulate that information. It also includes the liberty to criticize those in authority, other causes and those in other countries.

But this freedom brings with it responsibilities. American communicators are responsible for striving for objective, unbiased and balanced reporting. They are responsible for giving the opposition a chance to respond to their stories. They are responsible for protecting the "public's right to know."

We at Wartburg have been blessed with freedom of the press, and expression in general. There has never been a serious infringement of student rights with respect to freedom of the press.

This is not to say people have not been angered by what has been reported. But those in authority have chosen not to repress student expression. Students remain relatively unfettered in their opportunities to make their opinions known.

However, freedom of the press is not something to be taken for granted. We are now at liberty to express ourselves; there is no guarantee that tomorrow or next month that freedom will still be granted us.

Members of the Wartburg community who are concerned about maintaining this essential freedom—and we all should be—can help preserve it. They can become involved in causes promoting freedom of the press. They can register their dislike over repression of the media by making their views known to those in authority—judges, legislators, executives.

Most importantly, they can insist that the student press and the press at large act responsibly. They can make the press aware of things they feel are irresponsible—by private letters, by letters to the editor, by guest editorials. The possibilities are unlimited.

Wednesday is not just another day to be honored in name only. It is a day to celebrate one of the greatest liberties America grants its students: freedom to perpetuate a free and responsible student press.

Brown offers rebuttal to Mohan in 'mythical' media debate

Dear John Mohan:

Your attack on the electronic media leaves me amused. You seem to me, if my senses serve me correctly, to dislike my profession. Yet, your comments have left your own profession vulnerable in a mythical debate of the two rivals of the Communication Industry (which has gone on since the discovery of the electron tube). Your mistakes we will attend to in a moment, but first...

"I ain't no dumb jock." Now, you would predictably contend that the previous statement in quotations was distasteful, and for the most part uncouth and unnecessary. On the contrary, my dear sir, I am a communicator. The prime function of my job is to entertain and inform the public. While the example in quotations is a bit extreme, it serves the purpose well.

Any English or Journalism major would probably cringe upon hearing this improper usage. They would go on to point out the use of the double negative, as well as the fact that the word "ain't" has not been properly accepted. But, none the less, I am a communicator; I talk with the people, not at them. Granted, John, you would feel that rather than communicate, we should educate those people on a higher level of communication.

But, I wish to point out that we are, like you, a business desiring a profit. Throughout the polls, surveys, and the like, our customers (listeners) prefer to be entertained as compared with being educated. And we all need to make money, don't we?

Actually, this entire editorial is redundant on two points. One, we are comparing apples and oranges. Your responsibility of a journalist is to maintain your "degree of accuracy and objectivity." Where our responsibility is to be brief yet objective and to provide our listener with, as you could say, the biggest bang for the buck for the few seconds he has to listen to us. On an average, the typical listener will only listen for a period of no more than five minutes in any given hour.

Secondly, why has this editorial occurred in the first place? To use up space? Or to entertain? You may charge me with libel, but I would care to point out the same to you. You have attacked the entire broadcasting media, where as you should have specified the cases of which you feel we have deceived you. I am a member of the entertainment media, not the news media, yet you carelessly throw me into your wastebasket of trite comments.

We almost forgot your two mistakes. One, you curse us, yet you continue to watch, as you say, Dan Rather five days a week. Either you find some value in this, such as news events up to date, or a good in-depth analysis of a news event, or else could we classify you as being masochistic? (No libel intended, John...) How can you claim a great distaste for radio, yet quote a recent Top 40 song? How did you come to hear that song? It was brought to you via the electronic media.

Finally, you talk of the power possessed by the media. You attacked a segment of the population without prior notice. If I were to do that, I would have to contact the individual prior to the comments being made as a result of regulations incurred by the FCC. You in many ways have more power than I, John.

Also, I could never pull a comment out of the "wastebasket" and put in the air, for the fear of slander. Yet, you may...

One last concluding remark: I have written this editorial within some level of competence. Can you, with the same level of competence, go on the air? Broadcasters, have a two-role persona to live, that of a journalist, and that of a communicator. Yes, John... there is intelligent life in the electronic media.

'Doonesbury' not just a comic strip

From almost the beginning of the year, a feature important to me was uprooted from my life, and we will be separated now for the next 20 months.

What I am talking about, of course, is the cartoon "Doonesbury." The creator, Gary Trudeau, has taken a leave of absence to rest and to let his subculture of characters grow into present times.

"Doonesbury" wasn't just a comic strip; it was a sharp-witted commentary on our society at its best. For example, how often is "Dennis the Menace" taken out of print as "Doonesbury" was during the 1980 presidential campaign. (Remember "In Search of Ronald Reagan's Brain")

I have very little against such comics as "Garfield" or "Marmaduke." Sure they're cute, and I guess that's what I will miss about "Doonesbury"—it went beyond cute.

No matter how serious the subject Trudeau would lampoon, it still made one smile. It somehow put things into perspective.

I am really going to miss "Doonesbury" for the next 20 months. It will be interesting to see what becomes of Duke, B.J., Ginny, Joanie, Zonker, Mike and the rest of the "Doonesbury" cast.

I suppose Zonker will be a scheming junior executive wearing a suit and tie. Duke will probably serve his prison sentence, become "born again," write a novel about his experiences and head a political action committee.

I hope these things don't materialize. I guess I hate to see their idealistic, youthful ideas, like my own, grow out of me.

Well, Zonker, see you again in 20 months. I hope I'll recognize you. Until then, I guess it's "Garfield," "Rex Morgan" and "Little Orphan Annie." Ugh! Until John offends another academic department next week, keep smiling.

Main, Cottam discuss coed concerns in AAUP meeting

Coed concerns were presented by Dr. Doris Cottam, assistant professor of Sociology, and Elaine Main, assistant director of public information, to the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) Wednesday.

The impetus for their reports was an American Lutheran Church (ALC) conference about the status of women attending ALC colleges that Main and Cottam attended last spring, as Wartburg's representatives.

In their reports, both Main and Cottam were concerned that Wartburg may be better able to prepare women to deal with the decisions and problems they will face, as women, after graduation.

They hoped coeds at Wartburg are thinking of the implications of choosing marriage, career or both, and that they are realistically considering the pressure and influence of traditional female roles and attitudes upon those decisions.

Main began her report by listing a number of concerns experienced by women in their efforts to pursue a career. Main said she feared many coeds thought they felt pressured towards marriage and children and that many coeds also gave their own careers second priority in relation to marriage and children.

Main was also concerned about the problems women entering middle-life employment face. Family relationships change when women begin working and this often results in problems that threaten the woman's aspirations to work outside the home.

Main distributed a questionnaire, which was returned by approximately 50 students, in order to better determine the attitudes and self-perceptions of women at Wartburg and also to learn if women are anticipating any of the concerns she described.

Results from the questionnaire indicated that over 90 percent of the total number of women responding hoped to graduate and planned to pursue a career. A majority had also given thought to what they would do after their children have left home, if they have children.

Cottam also conducted a survey that produced similar results to the one distributed by Main. Cottam surveyed 95 women and learned that 96 percent of them plan to continue working after marriage.

Cottam's questionnaire also dealt with attitudes toward sex roles. The results indicated 93 percent believed a couple should share household duties; 66 percent felt the couple should share decision making; and 86 percent felt the careers of both the husband and wife should be considered when deciding where to live.

"If this sample is representative of women on our campus, most of them aren't following traditional sex roles," Cottam said. "I am afraid, though, that most young women are unrealistic in their expectations that they won't be discriminated against in the job market."

Women face unique problems in pursuing careers and both Main and Cottam agreed Wartburg should assist women in preparing for and dealing with these concerns.

Wartburg, UNI to begin special ed coop program

A cooperative program for the preparation of special education teachers has been worked out between Wartburg and the University of Northern Iowa (UNI).

The program is designed to qualify Wartburg students as teachers of mentally or emotionally disabled children.

Students enrolled in the program will do coursework at Wartburg during their freshman, sophomore and senior years and will complete the special education portion of the program at UNI their junior year. Additional junior year work normally will be taken at Wartburg.

Successful completion of the program will lead to teacher certification and a bachelor of arts degree from Wartburg.

Students entering the program must be approved by a joint committee of faculty from UNI and Wartburg, and all selected students must meet the UNI Department of Special Education requirements.

The placement and supervision of student teachers following successful completion of the UNI Special Education preparation sequence is Wartburg's responsibility.

It is not anticipated the number of students admitted to the cooperative program will exceed eight to 10 per year.

McCarthy claims U.S. urging violence

The government is urging the use of violence, McCarthy said, when they lure young people into the armed services by offering a paid education and future career. He said history has shown that "a good strong armed force is a way to create problems, not prevent them."

Non-violence is not a simple idea, McCarthy said, as it must be absorbed by the heart and mind. He referred to Lech Walesa, the Solidarity leader in Poland, as an individual with a good understanding of this. He added that much could be learned from the non-violent acts of Ghandi and Jesus.

"There is no need to make a staged protest when you can start right here and now," McCarthy said. "We can make a difference even if it's quiet and unseen. If we are afraid to do something, it is because it involves risk. But we have no choice, especially if we want to reclaim Christianity."

Winnipeg Ballet performs Wednesday

Artist Series features ballet

The internationally acclaimed Royal Winnipeg Ballet, called by the New York Daily News, "one of the finest ensembles of young dancers in the world today," will return to Wartburg's Artists Series stage Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Students may obtain tickets at the Neumann Auditorium Box Office Wednesday. Students get in free with their activity tickets.

The ballet, which is made up of 25 dancers and a 14-member orchestra, will premiere "Allegro Brillante" by George Balanchine, one of two works added to its repertoire this season.

Also on the program are "Five Tangos" by Hans van Manen, "Pas de Deux Romantique" by Jack Carter and "Rodeo" by Agnes de Mille.

"Allegro Brillante" is set to the first movement of Tchaikovsky's unfinished "Third Piano Concerto." Set for two principals and an ensemble, the ballet has no narrative.

Balanchine described it as "everything I know about classical ballet—in 13 minutes."

"Five Tangos" is considered by critics to be one of van Manen's most successful works. The music by Argentinian Astor Piazzola explores tango rhythms through electronics and jazz, as well as other contemporary techniques, while van Manen's choreography explores the tango dance form.

"Pas de Deux Romantique" is a pas de deux in the Romantic style, departing from the conventional pas de deux in as much as both dancers remain on stage through the complete performance, although there are variations for both of them. Bits of mime, along with virtuoso sections, make "Romantique" a light and joyous work.

"Rodeo" is de Mille's great classic of the American ballet stage. An amusing work, it tells the story of an awkward and tomboyish cowgirl hopelessly in love with the head wrangler at the Burnt Ranch. It was first performed by the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, Oct. 16, 1942.

Founded in 1939, the company received its Royal title in 1953, the first granted under the reign of Queen Elizabeth II. Arnold Spohr was appointed artistic director in 1958, and since then the Royal Winnipeg Ballet has become one of the world's major ballet companies.

It made its first Canadian tour in 1945 and completed its first American tour in 1954. Today, the company spends approximately 20 weeks per year touring in addition to having four home seasons.

The Royal Winnipeg, which developed the concept of the regional ballet festival, has won numerous awards at festivals in France, Japan and Bulgaria.

In 1981, Spohr was awarded the annual Dance Magazine Award for outstanding contribution to dance.

He was specifically cited for "nurturing and guiding the Royal Winnipeg Ballet from a regional company to international acclaim."

New council provides avenue to Welch

A new Dean's Advisory Council will meet weekly on Wednesday nights to provide students with another avenue to express concerns to Dean of Faculty Edwin Welch, according to Paul Langholz, academic ombudsperson.

Langholz said the council, which was designed as an extension of his office, will deal with wide topics to provide students with a more efficient way to approach the dean with concerns. Last week the council discussed the new grading system, core courses, faculty evaluations and the future of KWAR.

Students may bring concerns to any of the council members, Langholz said. The problems, which may include faculty complaints, will be handled confidentially. If the council can't resolve the problem, it will return to the student with the unanswered questions.

Many of the problems won't be pat, Langholz said. "The faculty and grading problems will take time to solve. This committee will take it to the dean so he can start working on it."

When asked if the decisions were made by the dean, Langholz answered: "It depends on the problem, but on the average I'd have to say yes. But we can provide a lot of input into his decision. We can provide him with enough information to assist him in his decision."

The reason for the council is to share information, Langholz said. "Any question is fair game, and the dean tries his best to answer it. The dean is very receptive to all comments and questions."

The council consists of the dean and seniors Edmond Bonjour, John Crosser and Janet Hunt; juniors Lori Hawn and Ed Ward; sophomore Langholz; freshmen Nimmie Abisegam and Jesse Lutabingwa.

The students were chosen by campus groups. Langholz said a letter was sent to campus groups asking for names of people to serve on the council.

All the names received were then put on another list and returned to campus groups. The groups were asked to vote for seven students. Those students now serve on the council with Langholz and the dean.

Financial aid future looking good: Brady

Things in the financial aid area may be looking up for Wartburg students, according to Susan Brady, director of financial aid.

On the state level, the Iowa College Aid Commission has requested an increase in the Iowa Tuition Grant. The highest amount a student can receive now, according to Brady, is $1,700. The commission has requested up to $2,300, which Brady thinks is very promising.

The Iowa legislature will vote on this request this spring. Brady anticipates an increase of at least $1,900 for next year and more increases in the future.

On the federal level, both the House and the Senate in the recent lame duck session of Congress voted to keep the funding levels the same as they stand for the next school year. Brady said this was fortunate because there was the threat of cutting funds.

"This is a major victory. The funding levels are holding steady and that is a very positive sign," Brady said.

Brady said if Congress did not decide and agree upon education regulations for the next academic year by April 1 they, in turn, would remain the same. Brady said this would create a better situation because it would enable her to implement aid and administer funds more easily.

Brady said she foresaw no major changes except for the necessity for verification of draft registration by all males before any federal aid could be administered.

Brady also stressed the importance for students to pick up financial aid forms for the 1983-84 school year. The priority deadline for financial aid is March 1. According to Brady, students who file their forms in time will be entitled for the best package of awards as opposed to students who didn't file in time simply because it operates on a basis of first come, first serve.

"We do our best for those students who apply on time," she said.

Several workshops were offered last week and forms were mailed to those students who were not able to attend. However, Brady said, those who did not receive forms in the mail may pick them up in her office.

Selective Service verification necessary for aid

18 years of age.

Every student who has registered for the draft will be required to produce a letter of verification from Selective Service. Selective Service mailed letters of verification to everyone who registered. If students can't produce the letter, Brady said, they will have to write the Selective Service and ask for a duplicate.

Letters supplied

Selective Service believes it can provide a duplicate within three weeks after receiving a request, according to the National Association of Financial Aid Administrators' newsletter. Contrary to that report, Brady has heard from friends that Selective Service is six months behind in processing the paper work.

The regulations will clarify when the letter of verification is needed. Brady said there are three possible times to enforce the law. First, the school might have to receive the letter when students apply for federal money. Second, the letter might be needed when the money is awarded. Finally, the letter might be required when the money is distributed.

Programs affected by the law, Brady said, include Guaranteed Student Loans, Plus Loans, Pell Grants, Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants, National Direct Student Loans and College Work Study. She added the State of Iowa Scholarships might be affected because they are partially funded by the federal government.

After playing only two games, the men's basketball team has an important conference battle against arch-rival Luther tomorrow night in Knights Gymnasium.

Luther comes in with a 2-0 conference record, both one point wins at Buena Vista and Simpson. Wartburg is 1-1 in conference play.

Levick said the key to winning tomorrow will be concentration and intensity. He also said the level of emotion will also be important, because he expects a tight game.

The Norsemen are led by center Willie Mckinnie. Mckinnie is averaging just under 25 points a game.

The Knights return home after one big win, and one tough loss on the road.

The Knights lost their opening conference game Friday at Simpson, 87-78. Simpson's consistency and free throw shooting were the difference in the game.

Despite Simpson's tough field goal percentage, both teams hit 28 field goals. Simpson, however, went 25-26 from the line, while Wartburg was 16-20.

"Simpson shot well, played reasonably good defense and they played smart," Levick said. "They played two consistent halves. They shot 56 percent in the first half and 57 percent in the second half."

Levick also said the first five minutes of the second half was a key in the game. The Knights failed to score in those five minutes and couldn't catch up because Simpson shot so well from the free throw line.

Senior forwards Greg Schmitz and Mark Merritt led the Knights, scoring 24 and 20 points respectively. Merritt hit five three-point goals, while Schmitz led the Knights in rebounding with seven.

The Knights certainly turned things around on Saturday night, thrashing Buena Vista 86-55.

Again it was Merritt and Schmitz leading the Knights, scoring 30 and 24 points respectively. Schmitz also had nine rebounds.

Knights prepare for Penn after UIU cancellation

by KEVIN BASKINS

Wartburg's women's basketball game Friday at Upper Iowa has been canceled because of the Peacocks' lack of players. The women will have more than a week to prepare for next Monday's conference game against William Penn. Wartburg has a 1-0 conference mark after last month's victory over Luther.

Wartburg scored their second victory over Iowa Wesleyan for the year, but suffered setbacks to Gustavus Adolphus and Carthage in the All Lutheran Tournament at Luther last weekend. Grand View won the team championship in the tournament.

Free throws hurt the Knights in the first game against Gustavus as Wartburg hit only 8 of 19 from the line. Gustavus cashed in on 12 of their 16 free throws to help them to a close 68-62 victory. The Knights were also plagued by 16 turnovers.

Junior Lynn Dose once again led the Knights in scoring with 22 points and with 14 defensive rebounds. Junior Sue Lynch also scored in double figures with 14.

Dose had another 22 point performance in Wartburg's 74-49 victory over Iowa Wesleyan. Senior Diane Smith went 5-6 from the field for 10 points and was Wartburg's only other double figure scorer for the game. Dose had 18 rebounds for the game.

A poor first half hurt the Knights against Carthage. Wartburg fell behind by 12 points in the early going to trail 36-24 at halftime. The Knights were only able to make up five of the deficit in the second half and lost to the tournament's eventual runner-up, 65-58.

Dose again led the Knights with 17 points and 20 rebounds. Lynch scored 16 points and had eight rebounds, while sophomore LeAnn Bollum scored 12 points.

Dose and Lynch both drew praise from Wartburg coach Kathy Meyer for their tournament play.

"Lynn Dose had an excellent all around tournament for us and Sue Lynch scored a lot of points," said Meyer.

"Against Gustavus, turnovers and free throws really hurt us. In our game against Carthage our field goal percentage (Wartburg hit only 39 percent from the field) and a bad first half is what hurt us," Meyer said.

"Against Iowa Wesleyan, we really played well, especially on defense," Meyer added.

"We'll be working mostly on our man-to-man press this week in practice, and trying to get our offensive plays down pat. We'll also be trying to schedule another game to make up for Upper Iowa's cancellation," Meyer said.

NFL coaches finding off-season tough

With the regular season long over, the NFL has graciously reached its sudden-death portion of the 1982 campaign: The Super Bowl Tournament.

My hat goes off to the 16 teams who emerged from the wreckage of the regular season and battled for a berth in Super Bowl XVII in a revised playoff format concocted especially for the strike-shortened season.

So much for those 16 teams who made it. What about the 12 who failed and what's happening with them?

Well, the word isn't too good if you're a head coach. Within the two weeks since the season ended, five head coaches have bitten the dust, another one hasn't yet decided and another one should.

Ray Malavasi and Marv Levy were axed following their teams' final game of the season, while Ray Perkins resigned from the Giants to take over for the "Legend of Legion Field," Bear Bryant, who called it quits as college football's winningest coach.

Last Friday, Atlanta's Leeman Bennett added his name to the list of fired coaches.

Over at Philly, Dick Vermeil ended his reign of the Eagles saying he was "burnt out" and the change would do him and the Eagles good.

Too bad. Vermeil was one of those exceptional coaches who had the ability to take a player and model him into an all-pro. I think that had he stayed one more year he may have built a consistent winner like the aspirations he had for the Eagles. If next year proves to be like this year, when in doubt... punt

then get out. The true essence of his coaching ability will go unnoticed for some years to come.

What about the defending Super Bowl champion 49ers? The fairy tale dream of a year ago turned into a nightmare this year in the Bay. Bill Walsh can't decide if he wants to coach next fall or not, but indicates he will step down if he, as general manager, can find a suitable replacement.

As for the coach that should take the back seat—he is none other than Eddy Biles of Houston.

Here's a man who has taken the good name of the Houston Oilers and rubbed out whatever decency the Oilers had built over the years when O.A. "Bum" Phillips was at the reigns.

But I guess you can't really blame Biles for Houston's bumbling. The Oilers' front office executives have obviously been sitting out in the hot Texas sun too long. They hired Biles back for another season.

I feel sorry for Earl Campbell. You know he'll be in for another bumped and bruised season. Only Biles can take such a brilliant running back like Campbell and turn his rags-to-riches career back into rags. Better stick to doing Skoal commercials, Earl; Biles's game plans are damaging to your health.

And what can be said about first year head coach Frank "kick-the-punter-in-the-butt" Kush? Not too much, except his Colts finished at the rear of the NFL with a 0-8-1 record. Their 20-20 tie with Green Bay was about the only thing Kush can build on for next year's Colts. If he can't ride the Colts to the top next year he may ride one out of Baltimore sooner than he expects.

Two duals for matmen after upset of B.V.

by JON GREMMELS

With a week's rest following an upset win over nationally ranked Buena Vista, Wartburg's wrestlers hope to continue their success against Upper Iowa and Coe this week.

The Knights used four pins to drop Buena Vista, 27-20, Wednesday in Knights Gym. The Beavers entered the meet ranked eighth in the NCAA Division III by Amateur Wrestling News. Wartburg also defeated Loras, 35-10, in the opener of Wednesday's double dual.

Senior Ryan Abel scored a key fall over B.V.'s Jim Lenth, last year's Iowa Conference 158-pound champion, at 167 to help the Knights pass the Beavers. Three other Wartburg wrestlers, senior Scott Becker, junior Mike Hogan and freshman Al Hooper, scored falls for the Knights.

Wartburg Coach Dick Walker was pleased with the Knights' performance.

"I was as pleased with that meet as with any I can remember," Walker said. "I was pleased with the way our kids stuck with it. For our young kids who are still improving, it was gratifying."

Key pin by Abel

Abel fell behind Lenth, 9-4, in the second period, before knotting the score at 9 late in the period. In the third stanza, Abel used an escape and a takedown to go ahead, 12-10, and recorded the fall with two seconds left in the match.

"It was tough to get Ryan going early," Walker said. "Lenth is not that good on his feet. We thought that Abe could take him down continuously. [When Abel went ahead in the third period] we thought that if he [Abel] rode him [Lenth] out and won, we would have been happy." Walker added the pin was a bonus.

Abel said, "He [Lenth] died, and I took advantage of it. This is the biggest dual meet win for us since I've been here. We caught them on the right night. When Bing [Miller, sophomore] beat B.V.'s Brett Stoneking [at 118], it started us out well."

Miller gave the Knights a 3-0 lead with an 8-4 decision over Stoneking, a freshman who won two state titles while at Lisbon High School. Miller took a 5-4 lead into the third period and scored with an escape and a takedown to lock up the win.

"I felt good tonight," said Miller, who was 8-21 as a freshman last year. Miller upped his record to 8-9 with the win and gave a reason for his improvement. "We have a lot of little kids in the wrestling room this year which makes for good workouts."

The Knights lost the next two matches before regaining the lead at 142. At 126, Buena Vista's Curt Cawley, who placed fourth in NCAA Division III nationals at 118 last year, beat freshman Bruce Streicher, 8-2. The Beavers' Paul Van Oosbree earned a superior decision, 12-0, over freshman Mike Brumfield at 134.

Hogan put the Knights out in front, 9-8, when he pinned B.V.'s Dave Greenlee at 142. Greenlee, a state champion at Washington High School last year, jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the first period. Greenlee took Hogan down to his back to score five of the points. Hogan eventually evened the score, 8-8, in the third period and pinned Greenlee in 6:46.

"Mike's a tough kid, conditioning-wise," Walker said. "If he's ahead in the third period, he can score big points." Hogan upped his record to 15-6 with the win.

Dan Dresser of Buena Vista beat freshman Scott Nelson, 7-3, in the 150-pound match. That win gave the Beavers an 11-9 edge in the team score.

Knights go on top for good

Hooper put the Knights ahead to stay in the next match (158), though, with a pin over John Firkins in 4:11. After a scoreless first period, Hooper went ahead 4-0 in the second stanza with a reversal and a near fall. He then pinned Firkins later in the period.

"I figured Hooper could win," Walker said, "but I never would have picked him to pin his man. Hooper's coming along quite well. Allen picks up things quite well; he's a good learner. We're pleased with him at 158."

Abel's fall put the Knights up by 10 points, 21-11, but the Beavers fought back and narrowed the margin to one point going into the final match.

B.V.'s Brian Bedard, the conference champ at 177 last year, decisioned sophomore Scott Ruhnke, 6-4, at 177. At 190, the Beavers' John Brown, who placed sixth in Division III at 190 last winter, won by default over sophomore Roger Pagel. The scoreless match ended after 42 seconds when Pagel hyperextended his elbow.

The six-point win for the Beavers cut Wartburg's lead to 21-20. Walker was unsure as to how long Pagel would be out of the Knights' line-up. Pagel is Wartburg's lone 190-pounder.

"Brown is a pretty tough kid," Walker said. "Pagel would have had to wrestle pretty well to stay with him. But I didn't see a six-point match coming before it started." Brown would have had to pin Pagel for B.V. to score six points, otherwise.

Becker notches 70th career win

Becker wrapped up the upset by notching his 70th career win with a fall over Wade Winekauf. Winekauf scored early with a takedown, but Becker was able to recover and pin Winekauf in 1:30.

"The only surprise in that match was that he [Becker] gave up a takedown," Walker said. He added that it's nice to know you have a good chance of getting six points in the final match. Seventeen of Becker's 18 wins (he has lost just three times this year) have been by fall. Of his 70 career wins, 61 have been pins.

Abel said he thought an advantage the Knights had over the Beavers was that most of Wartburg's team had already wrestled once that night (in the Knight's 35-10 win over Loras). Buena Vista, on the other hand, used several reserves as they beat Loras, 30-15, in the second meet of the triangular.

Walker agreed with Abel and added, "At this time of the year when the kids are in condition they can wrestle with an hour's rest." Miller, Streicher, Brumfield, Hogan, Nelson, Abel and Pagel all had wrestled in the win over Loras.

Knights top Loras

Walker said, "We wrestled pretty well against Loras. That's the kind of meet where you go out to wrestle individually knowing that you'll do well as a team." Loras did not field wrestlers at three weights, resulting in 18 forfeit points for the Knights.

Hogan won a major decision at 142 for Wartburg against Loras. Winning decisions for the Knights were Miller, Brumfield and Pagel. Hooper, Ruhnke and junior Jay Bean won by forfeits, while Nelson and Abel drew.

The lone loser for Wartburg was Streicher, who was pinned by Keith Colsch, who Walker called Loras's top wrestler, in 2:40.

"I've been pleased with Streicher," Walker said. "He went for a move and got caught, and that can happen to a freshman."

Two duals this week

Wartburg hosts Upper Iowa Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Knights Gym. Thursday the Knights travel to Cedar Rapids to face Coe.

"Upper Iowa has some good kids, but they're short at some weights," Walker said. The Peacocks' top wrestlers are Ryan Haines at 118 and Steve Geise at 177. Haines placed fourth at 126 in the IIAC last year, but is back at 118 where he has wrestled for most of his career. Geise was the conference runner-up at 177 in 1981. Upper Iowa is expected to have only five wrestlers for the meet.

Walker said Coe should have a good team. Last year, the Hawks placed second in the Midwest Conference and blasted the Knights, 37-6, in Waverly.

"We got beat by Coe badly last year," Walker said. "I'll be sure to remind them [Wartburg's wrestlers] of how poorly we wrestled."

Walker plans to use the same line-up in this week's meets that he used in last week's wins. But he may rotate his heavyweights (Becker and Bean) and wrestle each in one meet. He said he might also use senior Matt Walker at 150 in one of the duals if the younger Walker can make weight.
